NEW DAILY IN VIRGINIA

The publisher of the Times-Virginian technically got his start in the newspaper business as a sort of "printer's devil" in Culpeper, Virginia, while yet a student in high school. However, our first years as a full-time newspaper man were put in on the Eastern Shore NEWS, at Onancock, in Accomack County on Virginia's distant Eastern Shore peninsula. We have always considered its publisher, John T. Borum, one of Virginia's ablest newspaper men.

On March 5, the first issue of the Eastern Shore Daily News will appear. We offer congratulations.

The semi-weekly Hopewell News recently began a daily, and now the state salutes another. Surely Virginia journalism is on the march.

Let Bedroom of Youngsters Reflect Hobbies, Interests

By Ertta Haley

IS YOUR CHILD'S bedroom a place to sleep in or is it planned to show his hobbies and interests as well?

A child whose bedroom is designed to take care of his hobbies as well as his sleeping will enjoy his room more and will not have to be told constantly to busy himself with something. If the parents show an interest in the child's having hobbies, the youngster will start thinking in those terms and foster interests in things which will give him much joy throughout his lifetime.

Rooms should not only contain those essentials of living such as a desk, bed and chair, but they should be the embodiment of hobbies, interests and tastes—a picture of what the person is who lives in it.

When furnished like this, rooms require a little more thought in the planning, but their dividends are greater than the effort to make them so. A room that invites its occupant to make model planes or boats, dolls or houses, painting or clay modeling is a happy room designed for creative effort.

Let the youngster help in deciding what he wants, and if old enough let him help decorate it. A room that has a lot of work and thought put in it brings its people close to terms of real living and staves off boredom.

Yes, but you have no idea what children would bring into their rooms, if I let them, I can hear some mothers saying. Well, youngsters do develop passing fancies in all sorts of strange things and in this case they might need guidance.

The little fellows who carry birds and insects in their pockets and want to bring them into their rooms might be directed toward an interest in biology. Pictures can frequently substitute for the live animal if they are large, attractive and colorful enough. Perhaps he would like to keep a bulletin board of those which he has seen outside, or make a scrapbook of them.

Pink edges for decoration . . .

Hobbies Determine Room Decoration

Boys are usually harder on furnishings than girls, so their rooms are best when sturdily furnished. Striped materials show soil least and can be utilized to advantage.

Have room reflect hobbies.

Select warm or cool colors, depending upon the exposure of the room.

The drapes and one or two chair covers may be of a durable striped material harmonizing with the background colors of the walls.

If your boys are interested in painting and are apt to be a bit careless with paints, the best thing to do for drapes and covers is to use heavy oilcloth. If you cu drapes with pinking shears, no finishing is necessary. These off easily and are no task to clean.

To avoid clutter when youn have collections of toys, wh and whatnot, have shelves bu the room, and encourage the place their objects on the sh in an attractive pattern. If have lots of assorted things best answer to this is a chest plenty of drawer space; or a with built-in drawers will serv purpose nicely.

When boys are old enough interested in making furnitur refinishing it, they can easily on the furniture in their own You'd be surprised at how more pride they will take in ing things neat if they've cr part of the furnishings theme

For boys who need reminder mail, for assorted pictures things of that nature, a ba board above the desk is inval for keeping the room tidy.

For two or four boys in one use double-decker beds to space. The coverings shoul sturdy as the youngsters will on them.

Girl's Room May Be Tailored or Feminine

The girl who's feminine will a bed and dressing table cover ruffly ruffled material. mothers would like to dissuade daughters from such thought cause of laundering problems if they remain unconvinced, only answer to this is the enl of their aid when it comes to ing.

Actually, though, if you sho girl pictures of rooms which attractive, but without the you may be able to get change her mind.

The girl who is tailored, likes things neat and trim, probably prefer a studio couch bed since it can take a more ta cover.

If a cool background color as gray or blue is chosen, it's to warm the room with tangerin red or warm yellow colors fo couch or bed and for the coverings.

The in-between room, which combination of both tailored feminine is fun to live with studio couch may still be use the drapes and perhaps a cover will be in a gay floral p or a bright print. This does with lace and ruffles but is keep trim and tidy without sa ing any thing of its girlish looks.

Provide Drawer Space To Preserve Neatness

Low cabinets with shelves m lined against the walls of the If the closet is small. This c an inexpensive project if unfi furniture is made or bought painted with flat or enamel depending upon the room.

Unless you provide suffi place in which clothing, shoe other things can be placed, the so there need be no reason for to clutter the room.

If you lack space for a r desk, have one made with hinges that attaches to the w that it can be let up and do used. Have a proper chair good light near it.

Be Smart!

Have your dainty dress pumps and your ankle slippers, too, in one and the same pair. It's easy when the anklets even unto the third strap, are removed as quickly as a bracelet from the wrist. The trick is in making the high cut style the basis of a secure anchor for these straps, yet looking just like another fashion whimsey of the moment when the slippers are worn as stripped pumps.

School Dress

Here's a striped cotton d good for schoolwear, with pr tucking and spanking crisp c and cuffs. The stripes are in g uated widths in petal gray a pastel combination. The ro tucking accent the pretty s fulness. Made of Avondale's forized, mercerized cotton collar and cuffs of birdseye p the dress is one of the costu from an all-cotton wardrobe from patterns.
